THE WAY IT LOOKS—AUGUST 1948

Fall Grains.—There will be a good supply of high quality seed wheat. The same can be said of seed rye and the situation on barley is much better than last season. Crop News and Views on "Fall Seeded Grains" is enclosed and contains information about different varieties of wheat, rye, barley and general recommendations on seeding these crops.

Alfalfa Clovers.—It's a little early to have an accurate picture on these. However, rainy weather in the large alfalfa seed areas has meant most second cuttings were made into hay. The supply is rather tight for summer seedings and many believe seed prices will be higher than last year. Red Clover and alsike seed should be in larger supply than a year ago and this may help offset the increase in cost of alfalfa seed.

Grasses.—Early reports on bluegrass, redtop, orchard grass and timothy indicate a large reduction in new crop seed. With fairly large carryovers on several of these, prices will not increase as much as might have been expected.

Hybrid Seed Corn.—The best prospects in a number of years for high yields of top quality seed with good sized, deep kernels. There's a reduction in acreage but with higher yields there should be an adequate supply of seed corn. Place your order now or during early fall. SCOTTS will have the same wide variety of hybrids as last year with full listing in the December price list.

Again we remind you that SCOTTS Farm Seeds are high in quality and germination, are noxious weed free, and that safe delivery is guaranteed.
